JOHN M'GRAW TALKS

Baltimore Manager Expresses His Opinion of the Base Ball Situation.

LEAGUE WILL DROP THE ORIOLES

"Mugsy" and Robbie Likely to Head a Team in Association.

CURRENT SPORTING NOTES

"If I am not playing base ball in this city next season, it will be the fault of the people of Baltimore," said Manager John McGraw of the Baltimore team to a Baltimore American reporter last night. "I am willing to do business on a most reasonable basis with local people, and if I get away from them it will be their fault. I believe that talk of Baltimore going into the Eastern League is all tommy-rot, and it is my present belief that this city will be represented in the American Association next year. I know that the Eastern Association movement is immensely popular in Baltimore, and that a team in it would bring excellent artistic and financial results from the take-off."

"Statements that it has all been arranged and that the Baltimore are to play in the Eastern League are nothing but a mere guess, and I think, a very bad guess at that. It should develop that this city would be cast with a minor league you can count me out for I don't believe the people of this great city would stand for minor league base ball."

"What do the people think now about the National League being reduced to eight clubs? You all think the eight club plan is a sure go now, and don't you remember what I said immediately after the last meeting of the major league magnates? I said there would be eight clubs in the league, and that Baltimore would be switched. There was a lot of talk about ten clubs then, but I believed it would be a clumsy arrangement, and that the existing club combination was bound to happen. And now, I see that almost everybody else says the same thing."

"I don't know as much about the plans of the American Association as people credit me with. You see, it's this way: I can tell the association people all my plans. If I have any, and I cannot come myself. On the other hand, they will tell me all they know until they are convinced I am a stand-up fellow. The association is ready to go ahead without Baltimore, but I guess they won't pass us by if they find we are to do business."

"The statement that Baltimore capitalists are to incorporate a company within a few days to operate base ball is a bit premature, but in the main true. I have been approached by a number of men who have shown me that they can supply plenty of money to operate a team in the American Association. These men are ready to meet at any time, and the incorporation of the team is the least of the troubles. The only difficulty is to get Baltimore in a suitable place for a ball field, a minor league would never do."

"If the American Association is organized, and I think it will be—there might and might not be war. The great danger of hostilities would come from one organization tempting the players of another. If we were to organize a team in the American Association, a manager of a minor league organization might offer better inducements to men like Sheppard and McGinnis, and they might accept, which would put us in the humor for retaliation. The men of the Baltimore team of last season would personally like to play here. Indeed, the men of the old pennant-winning team would prefer to play here. Men like Kelley and Jennings would rather play in Baltimore than any other city, but they must consider their financial interests. I am sure that the men of last year's Baltimore team would play here if given the same terms as elsewhere, and I don't doubt that our own management would permit us to be sufficiently liberal."

"If the American Association should be organized, and Baltimore come into its circuit, with myself as manager, it should study the artistic end of the game always before any other. The men who would be the owners of the club would well know the need of caring for the financial end, but, I believe, if the sporting end is carefully fostered, the money end will take care of itself."

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION COURSE.

Probable Selection of the Harlem River by the Speedway.

At the annual meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, to be held in New York tomorrow night, the course for the national regatta for 1900 will be chosen. It is now considered probable that the races will be held on the Harlem river, in upper New York. This course has been selected by James Pickin, who has for years acted as starter at the championship races. The course extends along the speedway from above the Washington bridge to High bridge, one mile and a half straight away. No matter what the weather may be the hills prevent very rough water, and from the banks above thousands of persons can see the races, the water being calm and the expenses of the regatta will be about $2,000, which amount has already been subscribed by New Yorkers interested in rowing. Prof. Forrester, James Pickin, Julian D. Maher and E. H. Pelton of the executive committee, under the new course, and in case of rough water, are needed, its selection is looked upon as assured.

May Challenge De Oro.

The former pool champion, Jerome Keough, says he is getting ready to challenge his old-time rival, Alfredo De Oro, for the championship.

The latter said that he was willing to make a match with Keough, but that he would certainly wish to play in New York city and for not less than $200 a side. "The time limit on the championship claim expires April 12," said the Cuban, and Keough will have to hurry or I shall claim the trophy. Then I am expecting to go to Denver, Col., to play a match with the local expert, J. A. Malone. On my return from there, I will probably make a tour of the southwest and Mexico in company with John Dahl, the manager of Jake Schneider.

Rogues' Good Hunt.

Thieves made a good haul of provisions last night at the residence of Dr. J. Morgan Barber, No. 918 E. street northwest. Three dressed ducks, twenty-five pounds of sausage, two pieces of bacon and a ham were stolen. During recent weeks several similar robberies have been committed in the neighborhood. The meats were kept in an ice box in rear of the house, and the climbing of the back fence was all that was necessary in order to reach them. Soon after the robbery was discovered this morning complaint was made to the police.
